

Timuay Jose Anoy's Family Tree

According to the customs of the Canatuan Subanon, the title of Timuay is usually passed along from father to second eldest son. The eldest son is not chosen because he it is his job to advise the Timuay. However, it is up to the current Timuay and the Timuay's relatives to name and choose a successor. The next Timuay must be of the bloodline of the Timuays, but he need not be a son of the previous Timuay.

In this diagram the Timuays have been marked with asterisks (*). During his lifetime, Taga Anoy clearly identified his nephew Jose Anoy as his successor.
